

Election Manifesto

I hated biology in school because no teacher taught in a way that sparked an interest. Later, when I joined Quora, I learnt how birds were technically dinosaurs, and thus reptiles. I read fascinating stuff like convergent evolution, where two unrelated organisms end up looking like each other. These made me realise that Biology, which I hated so much, wasn't bad at all. How about we do something similar here. We all dislike some subject from other disciplines when we come to our IIT. Maybe we could have discussion sessions, where each one has the goal to make their field fascinating to others.

My idea is to bring people together through academics. Love for academics is one thing we all IITians have in common (how else did we reach IIT?). There are plenty of ways to do so. Workshops, chat groups, the possibilities are endless. While I am at it, I want my ideas to be executed precisely as per your preferences. After all, I represent you! If this excites you, may I have your vote?
